“ So many times I should've said that I love you Dad, and I didn't...but, I'd like to believe that you knew that I did. I always thought of you as my personal SuperMAN! In my mind you were Superman, you were so tall. You also made it through so much, various surgeries and that's what made me always say my Daddy will be ok, there's no kryptonite that could take you down....I miss hearing your voice and your laughter, and I always think of you while I watch football because you would always tell me which team would win and I can only remember a couple of occasions that you were wrong. I miss you, I will always love you, and I'm thankful that you were my Dad and for the love that I always felt from you.....forever in my heart.

“ As I look back at your life I wonder. I wonder if I said thank you enough. I wonder if I said I love you enough. Thank you for all the big sacrifices you made for me. Thank you for all the support you gave me (even when I wasn't paying attention to it) You have given me alot to pass on to my kids. You even thought me a little bit on being a good grandfather. You thought me hard work, self value, courage and integrity. Laughter, smiles, music, westerns & music will never be forgotten. The memories will forever play in my mind everyday. It's been close to 5 months and I'm still having troubles dealing with you being gone. Some days are better then others. If I didn't show you or tell you how much I appreciated everything you done I'm telling you now. I know it my be a little late hopefully you are watching down & seeing me struggle right now. I will forever be grateful. Lee-Maur
