“ As me and the other Aviation instructor looked on at the new class in orientation this one kid kept raising his hand every few minutes asking questions. This went on for a while. I looked at the other instructor and said I bet he will be in my class. When they divide the students up we don't know who's in our class. After the completed the first week of math it was time for the classes to start. I wait about 15 minutes late before I enter the classroom so they can get to know each other a little. There was Ramell front and center right under the podium. I knew it!!! What I didn't know was the bond that was about to happen. Far after school we remained very close to the point I was a part of his family. Events and everything. One day he looked me in the eye and asked can you be my dad I want to call you Pops....Thats my son and at Tinker everyone knows be careful do you know who his dad is?.....Kevin Jeffries ❤️
