“ God does not make his people immune to the changes of human life, but give us grace to see things through to a satisfactory conclusion. Throughout it all God stays the same and controls human event in such a way that those who trust in Him will find the comfort and the courage to endure.

First I would like to thank God for Ryan's grandparents and let them know they did an AWESOME job in preparing him for this world. Ryan is a special young man, he touched my life in a way that I will never forget. Whenever I saw Ryan he greeted me with a smile, hug and I love you mom. He would always invite us to church and as we would arrive in the parking lot he would be running to the car with his BIG SMILE. I would always tell him a few things about life and I made sure I said Ryan you know mom loves you, and he would say yes I love you too. Ryan's mission on this earth was to show and spread love, and that is what I saw in him. I hope that what I said and meant to Ryan was enough to keep him the days that he was here. I thank God for the life of Ryan and whatever I don't understand about this process I know that now Ryan is okay and resting. Such a gifted and great young man. I will truly miss Ryan and so will all who knew him in their own special way. I don't take this lightly and I'm praying for our young people to stay in and finish the race. Life is hard... But is LOVE enough to keep us here, not if GOD loves us first.

“ I will always remember the first time my son, Cody, brought Ryan in to meet me while I was working. He took to me, as I took to him right away! From the moment Ryan came into our lives, he was my second child, my youngest son. Such a kind, sweet, respectful soul. I will miss him terribly, already do. I will miss the phone calls, him calling just to say "you alright mama"? I will miss the visits, the laughs and the love we shared with him. Fly high Ryan, son, I love you💔💔💔
